IN the compilation of this Directory—the third in the series—the plan adopted last year has been generally followed, but it is believed that the work as a whole has been greatly improved upon. The List of Streets has been revised and corrected to date, and is arranged to show, under each title, the relative location of all intersecting streets; and appending to the alphabetical directory of residents will be found a Street List of Householders—this being a reprint of the specially starred names in the general directory, arranged in the order of the house numbers on each street.

In the Directory for 1894, as well as for 1895-6, the official house numbers assigned by the town engineer to every 25 feet of street frontage (except in the thickly settled districts, where a number is given to every 12½ feet), were given in connection with the names of residents, whether appearing upon the buildings or not. The Selectmen of the town had passed an order to enforce the numbering in accordance with this plan, but a large number of householders have failed, thus far, to comply with the order. It was deemed best, therefore, to give in the present volume the numbers that appear upon the buildings, whether “official” or otherwise. With the exceptions noted, the numbers printed are the official house numbers.

The total number of names in the Directory is 6684. Out of the total names recorded, about 3200 are householders (heads of families) and are thus indicated by a special star (*).

BROOKLINE

BROOKLINE, originally a part of Boston and known in colonial times as the Muddy River Hamlet, was set off and incorporated as an independent township in 1705. The parent metropolis has reached out and absorbed the territory on either side of the town, and has so nearly surrounded Brookline as to leave but a boundary of two and one-half miles around the western corner, where it is bordered by the city of Newton. The town is about four and one-half miles long and an average of two miles wide, and contains 3,736 acres of land that is taxed. It is the most important town in Norfolk County, paying about one-third of the entire county taxes, and occupies a unique position from the fact that it is wholly isolated from other territory of the county — Boston being in Suffolk County and Newton in Middlesex. Brookline enjoys the distinction of being the wealthiest town in the commonwealth, its total valuation being over $70,000,000. It is beautifully situated, and its easy accessibility to Boston, its numerous churches, its excellent schools, its superior water supply, its perfect system of sewerage and its well-kept streets, coupled with a popular form of town government and an unusually low rate of taxation, combine to make it an ideal place of residence, and for this it is chiefly distinguished, it having very few manufacturing industries. The Beacon-street Boulevard runs diagonally across the town, almost in a straight line from the State House in Boston to the Chestnut Hill Reservoir. Electric cars upon the boulevard, and over Huntington avenue and Tremont street, furnish convenient means of transportation, and the Boston & Albany railroad has five stations within the limits of the town — one, Cottage Farm, upon the main line, and four upon the Newton Circuit branch; namely, Longwood, Brookline, Brookline Hills, and Reservoir. There is but one post-office in Brookline, the mail being delivered by carriers. There are few crowded streets; most of the residences are surrounded by ample grounds, thus insuring the best natural protection to the public health, and the death-rate is consequently low. The public buildings are of modern style, the Town Hall being of rose granite, built at a cost of $250,000, and having a seating capacity of 1200. The Public Library building cost $80,000 and contains about 45,000 volumes. A new High School building was erected last year in the residence center of the town, at a cost of $250,000, and is an enduring manifestation of the educational spirit that controls this splendid municipality.

HOW SHALL I FEED MY BABY?

Cow's Milk Does Not Agree.

Cow's milk does not agree with your baby; would you like to know why it does not? Of course you would, because you yourself are experiencing this difficulty to-day in your own household. The milk looks and tastes nearly the same as mother's milk but why is it that the baby is worried and unhappy, and has the colic when he takes the cow's milk?

Three Reasons for it.

There are three reasons why cow's milk does not agree, and we can make them perfectly plain to you. When we speak of the composition of milk, we must use figures, but we will do so as simply as possible. Suppose you have 100 lbs. of cow's milk: what does it contain? It contains 86 lbs. of water, 5 lbs. of sugar, 4 lbs. of cheese, 4 lbs. of butter, and 1 lb. of salts.

These quantities are in round numbers, and will answer for the present explanation. This is the composition of 100 lbs. of cow's milk. In order that you may intelligently compare the composition of these two substances (mother's milk and cow's milk) we will arrange them in tabular form, thus :

	100 lbs. Cow's Milk.	100 lbs. Mother's Milk.
Water	86 lbs.	87 lbs.
Sugar	5 lbs.	6 lbs.
Cheese	4 lbs.	2 lbs.
Butter	4 lbs.	4 lbs.
Salts	1 lb.	1 lb.
	<hr/> 100 lbs.	<hr/> 100 lbs.

First Reason. You observe that the cow's milk contains less sugar than the mother's milk. You observe, also, that the cow's milk contains double the quantity of cheese that mother's milk contains. This is the first reason.

Now, cheese is a substance that is excellent for calves, and babies too; it exists in large quantities in cow's milk, which is the calf's natural food, and the proportion of cheese in cow's milk is correctly adapted to the requirements of the calf's stomach; but the baby cannot take so large a quantity of cheese, and that is what disturbs him.

Second Reason. The second reason is that the cheese in cow's milk is of a different quality from the cheese in mother's milk, and it forms a different substance in the baby's stomach. In the stomach the cheesy portion becomes coagulated and forms a clot; the clots of cheese from mother's milk are soft and flocculent, and make no disturbance in the baby's stomach. The coagulated clot from the cow's milk is hard and tough, and the baby cannot digest it.

Third Reason. The third reason is that cow's milk is acid and mother's milk alkaline. If you will obtain a piece of litmus paper, you can readily try this for yourself. If you dip blue litmus paper into cow's milk, the litmus paper will become red; this shows that cow's milk is acid. If you dip red litmus paper into mother's milk, the paper will turn blue; this shows that mother's milk is alkaline. These are the three reasons why cow's milk differs from mother's milk, and therefore disagrees with the baby.

Now, in order to reduce the proportion of cheese, suppose you dilute 100 lbs. of cow's milk with 100 lbs. of water; you will have then, in the 200 lbs., 186 lbs. of water, 5 lbs. of sugar, 4 lbs. cheese, 4 lbs. of butter and 1 lb. of salts. Let us now compare this diluted cow's milk with the mother's milk, and see what the difference is, taking one-half of the 200 lbs. of diluted cow's milk, in order to compare equal quantities; we shall then have:

	100 lbs. Cow's Milk, Diluted	100 lbs. Mother's Milk.
Water	93 lbs.	87 lbs.
Sugar	2½ lbs.	6 lbs.
Cheese	2 lbs.	2 lbs.
Butter	2 lbs.	4 lbs.
Salts	½ lb.	1 lb.
	<hr/> 100 lbs.	<hr/> 100 lbs.

Simple Dilution Useless.

Now you will observe that in the diluted cow's milk the cheese is in about the same proportion that it is in the mother's milk, but you have reduced also the most important element in it, namely, the sugar; having less sugar to start with than the mother's milk, the cow's milk diluted contains only 2½ lbs. of sugar in 100 lbs., while the mother's milk contains 6 lbs. of sugar in 100 lbs.

The Real Remedy.

Now for a Remedy for these three objections to cow's milk for the baby. It is found by adding Mellin's Food to the diluted cow's milk. The Mellin's Food contains the sugar and salts necessary to bring up the proportions in the diluted cow's milk nearly as they are in the mother's milk. Mellin's Food is alkaline, and it is sufficiently so to neutralize the acidity of the cow's milk. Another important thing that Mellin's Food does is to act upon the cheese of the cow's milk so that when the baby is fed with it the cheese no longer forms in a large, solid clot, but forms in soft flocculent masses, which are readily absorbed by the stomach.

The Right Way.

The above explanation will sufficiently show how Mellin's Food renders cow's milk digestible for the baby and makes it so closely resemble mother's milk. Now we have told you the secret of successful hand-feeding for your baby.

Would you like to know the particular use of the sugar, the butter, the cheese, and the salts, and just what part they play in building up the child's body? You will find it in a little book called "The Care and Feeding of Infants," which contains much of interest to mothers in regard to the feeding of their children. It is published by the Doliber-Goodale Co.,

of Boston, who will send you a copy, free, by mail, if you write for it. To those who have not tried Mellin's Food they will send, free, by mail, a sample bottle sufficient for trial.

Streets, Avenues, Roads, Etc.

NOTE.—This list gives location of streets, avenues, etc., and shows what other streets run from them, or across them, with the numbers at which they intersect—the numbers being in accordance with the official plans. The position of the figures in connection with intersecting streets indicates whether they run to the right or left. Although numbers may not appear upon the buildings, the figures given will show the relative locations, if it be kept in mind that allowance is made for a number to every twenty-five feet on all streets of the town, except in the thickly-settled district, where a number is assigned for every 12½ feet. The streets numbered on the scale of 12½ feet are: Aspinwall avenue, from Harvard street to Perry; Boylston street, from Washington to Cypress; Brookline and Pond avenues; Prospect, School and Station streets; Walnut street, from Washington street to Upland road; and Washington street, from Huntington avenue to Holden street. Streets marked with an asterisk (*) are private ways.

BEST WORK ONLY.

COBB, BATES & YERXA,

680-692 Washington St., Boston,

ARE THE LARGEST DISTRIBUTORS OF MERCHANDISE
in their line of any House in New England.

They have the best assortment of goods, always fresh and reliable.

They sell them at very reasonable prices.

They deliver them to any part of Brookline every day in the week (except Sunday), free of expense.

There is no House that can serve you better, and there is none that desires your patronage more or will try harder to please you.

You can order your goods by Telephone, Postal Card,
or in person, and your orders will receive prompt and careful attention.

You will be so well satisfied with your purchases that you will do as thousands of others have done
and are doing, recommend your friends to trade with them.
